Industrial Visit 2025

Date: 1st March, 2025

The students attended an induction-cum-orientation program at IPCA Laboratories, led by experts from the Quality Assurance and IPQC departments. They were introduced to the history and global manufacturing profile of the Athal plant, established in 1995 for large-scale production of oral solid dosage forms for international markets. The site's compliance with major global regulatory authorities and its wide range of therapeutic drug categories were highlighted. During the guided tour, students observed key pharmaceutical unit operations—including granulation, compression, capsule filling, coating, and packaging—along with advanced equipment such as RMGs, FBDs, blenders, auto-coaters, capsule fillers, tablet compression machines, and blister packaging lines. They also learned about GMP protocols, cross-contamination control, pressure differentials, and quality checks like AQL testing. The visit concluded with observing live batches in production and a Q&A session, giving students valuable insight into real-world industrial pharmaceutical manufacturing.
